

Call for Director of NUPOC

Northwestern University's Prosthetics-Orthotics Center (NUPOC) invites individuals with a passion for clinical education that have leadership skills to join our full-time faculty in the Department of Physical Medicine & Rehabilitation of the Feinberg School of Medicine and serve as the Director of NUPOC, with primary responsibility to oversee our Master's in Prosthetics-Orthotics (MPO) program. This clinician-educator position is non-tenure eligible. Recruitment is open up to the academic rank of Associate Professor, dependent upon experience and qualifications.

Candidates must be an ABC Certified Prosthetist-Orthotist (or have an equivalent ISPO-recognized Category I credential) and have earned a Master's degree or higher. A minimum of 7 years' clinical experience in the field, together with significant teaching and supervisory experience are required. Primary administrative duties will be as Director of our Master's in Prosthetics-Orthotics (MPO) program; active participation in our education program plus ongoing collaboration with research faculty is expected.

A doctoral degree, experience in an academic P&O setting, and prior participation in clinical research would be advantageous. Qualified candidates with additional clinical credentials in a closely related field, such as physical or occupational therapy, are invited to apply.

NUPOC clinical faculty members are encouraged to remain actively involved in scientific research and clinical care. In addition, Northwestern University offers a tuition benefit to support faculty who are advancing their academic education.

Northwestern provides a generous benefit package including life, health and dental insurance; multiple tax-deferred retirement programs with a University contribution; and paid holiday, personal and vacation days. Initial salary and rank will be commensurate with the ability and qualifications of the selected candidate.

If you would like to join a solid team of experienced teachers and researchers in our award-winning facilities, while living and working in one of America's most vibrant lakefront urban regions, please forward a curriculum vitae and cover letter explaining your strengths and interests to:
